Please describe the records you are requesting and provide as much specificity as possible, including applicable date ranges.

This is a request to the department of corrections. I want the multiple dates of incarceration and release from doc facilities for the following former inmates. All dates; all stays. I am happy to pay any costs and would request an expedited response. Thank you. Joe Sexton. I've included my bio below.

Joe Sexton spent 25 years as a reporter and senior editor at the New York Times, and another eight years as a reporter and senior editor at ProPublica, the non-profit investigative news organization. He directed or assisted in six projects awarded Pulitzer Prizes, for breaking news, investigative reporting, feature writing, national and explanatory reporting. Projects he oversaw also won three Emmys. A story he directed, “An Unbelievable Story of Rape,” won the Pulitzer Prize for explanatory reporting and was the inspiration for the award-winning Netflix series, “Unbelievable,” starring Toni Collette and Kaitlyn Dever. His work was anthologized in The Best American Sportswriting, Houghton Mifflin, 1992. In 2021, he was awarded Columbia University’s Meyer Berger Award for distinguished human interest storytelling. “Snow Fall,” a story written by John Branch and edited by Sexton, won the Pulitzer Prize for feature writing and is considered a landmark achievement in digital storytelling. In 2022, a story for the New Yorker magazine he reported and edited won a George Polk award and an Overseas Press Club award for international reporting on human rights. His book, The Lost Sons of Omaha, will be published by Scribner in 2023. He is at work on a true crime documentary film with HBO. Sexton is the father of four girls, and is married to Beth Flynn, the deputy director of photography at the New York Times.
