

What I Do During Vermont Seasons

By Amelia [REDACTED]

I have lived in Vermont for my whole life and almost gone through 12 years worth of seasons. Me and my family do a lot during all seasons and every winter Vermont gets snow later in the year. Even though there's not a lot of snow, my family still loves winter and we do a lot. Me, my brother love playing in the snow and go snowmobiling with my dad. Me, and my mom loves Christmas decorating with my cousin. My mom always tries to get me and my brother to build a snowman

During spring I like to wait for the snow to melt so me, my brother, and my dad can go mudding in our side by side. At the beginning of April I started thinking of what to get my mom for her birthday. Me and my brother normally are ready for school to get out by the middle of spring. Me and my mom do a little gardening at the end of spring and do the rest in summer. My brother has baseball in spring so I go to most of his games. At the end of spring I start to think about my mom's side trip to Maine.

In summer a lot happens. My brother and I get out of school normally in the middle of June. Normally we go to Maine a week or two after school gets out and we are there for a week. Me and my family love camping and we try to go on the 4th of July weekend every year at Groton State Park. My dad and brother start their dirt bikes and I bike a lot. Also in summer me and my mom finish the garden and it stays for a few months.

In fall I like to jump in leaves at my grandparents' house with my cousin and my brother. My other favorite thing about fall is Thanksgiving because I get to see my family and my cousin, aunt, and uncle who lives in Burlington also the food. In the beginning of fall my brother starts football and I have to go to games. I also love seeing the leaves change color. At the end of fall when there is not a lot of snow my family and I put up our summer and fall stuff and get ready for winter.

Sir Isaac Newton once said that "nature is pleased with simplicity." This quote reminds me of Vermont because it's simple but beautiful and also reminds me how lucky I am to live in Vermont. My favorite season is summer and fall because my family spends the most time together in those seasons and I love spending time with my family.
