Earth day means a lot to me, helping me understand what harm we have done to the planet, alongside how to fix it, I always try my best to recycle and contribute back to the earth and help offset global warming by riding my electric skateboard with my dad, alongside using it to get around the neighborhood i live in so i can use less fossil fuels.

But even if my entire family went electric and did nothing but recycle and use electric power for everything, we would only offset it a tiny bit, which is why YOU should recycle to help the earth and prevent waste of materials.

Not to mention the food waste that often occurs, which is why you should also compost to at least help the ecosystems when you decide not to eat something.

You can also help by donating to charities, however i recommend investigating them and not instantly donating cash, as some people tend to do scummy activities with them instead of helping and planting trees or such.

Don't forget, you can also plant trees to help, anything counts!
