

Rily

I live in Vermont and these are some of the reasons that it's important to take care of our earth and Vermont. Vermont is a beautiful state all of the trees the maple syrup everything. But when there's trash everywhere and greenhouse gasses it is hard to enjoy it all. It's sad to look around at our once beautiful roads now filled with trash. All of this is super upsetting.

Here is a list of things to do to help our environment. We can try to not litter, we can use cars less and carpool when we can, Reduce reuse and recycle, Compost, and not use as much stuff. Everyone doing all this stuff could help us in the long run and now.

I believe it's unfair for all of this to be happening in the world. We need to be more grateful for our earth. Earthday is important because it's a day when everyone comes together to take care of our world and pick up trash and stuff that people throw outside. A day where people drive less they walk to do all of this stuff. I believe that Earthday should be every day but at least we have one day to help our earth.

In conclusion, I think it's not okay that people litter and don't recycle and also buy new stuff all the time. The reason i think this is because littering is bad for the environment and recycling is good for the world separating it from trash and buying new stuff all the time is bad because it more trash in the land fills. And carpooling could help the world because it would mean less greenhouse gasses.
