

Vermont has an awesome environment and is a great state. Vermont was the 14th state of the United States. It was the first state founded after the 13 colonies in 1791 on March 4th. Vermont is called the Green Mountain State. This is because in French “Ver” means green and “Mont” means mountain. So the French nicknamed Vermont the “Green Mountain State.” There are many special things about Vermont like the state bird, which is the Hermit Thrush. The Hermit Thrush looks similar to a small brown/white chickadee. Vermont also has a state flower called the red clover, even though it is a purple color. These, and other things are what make Vermont great.

Have you ever heard about Vermont’s environment? There is so much to do! One great thing about Vermont and something Vermont is really famous for is their mountains. They have a lot of great mountains. My family and I love Spruce Mountain. There is a tower you can climb at the top and there are some cool looking caves on your way to the top.

Vermont’s autumn attracts many tourists because of how great it looks with the different colored leaves and all the forests. My cousin and I like making super big piles of leaves and then we either destroy it or my sister does. Fall also has perfect temperatures. It’s mainly cool but not too cold so that’s why I love fall.

Winter in Vermont is very cold but with all the snow we get we have awesome sledding places and my friends and I build snow forts. Finally, summer in Vermont is special. It doesn’t last very long, so you try to enjoy it while you can. It gets pretty hot, it can get into the 90’s. But it isn’t always like this. Summer is my favorite season. Also, in Vermont’s summers there are plenty of great places to swim such as playgrounds, lakes, rivers, ponds or just pools. If you haven’t ever been to Vermont maybe this can change your mind. Vermont is a great state, quiet and safe.
