

Earth Day Essay

By Acer [REDACTED], Braintree school

A river flowing below a bridge. The cool waters on your skin. Rocks to bask on and the sun on your face. Splashing around. When you come home you know the rest of the day is gonna be great. All your friends running around playing tag.

But all that could be at stake due to too much large scale development and shopping malls. This creates asphalt roads which leads to increased water run off into our rivers and lakes. Then there's the large solar panels taking up the fields, windmills turning our beautiful landscapes into a factory like place. Do you really want our awesome fields and ridges to be ruined?

But there is hope for Vermont. Less large scale wind mills and solar panels and more bike trails connecting towns. Lowering cost for Vermont residents to enjoy the skiing in the mountains. If we push for these things there's hope that the people in Vermont can appreciate our lakes, rivers, mountains and fields.