

What I Love About Vermont

I personally think that Vermont is one of the most green, beautiful, and healthy environments I have ever lived in. There are several tourist attractions, and it is the perfect place to sit down on a bench and enjoy a creemee. When I lived in Alaska, we visited Vermont every summer and I remember all I wanted to do was swim in the wonderful clean rivers Vermont has to offer. All of the healthy trees and plants make it perfect for wildlife to thrive in Vermont, and it provides wonderful animals for everyone to admire.

One of my favorite places in Vermont is Mount Philo. Me and my father have gone hiking there several times, and the view once you get to the top is certainly something worth admiring. It's a great mountain for beginners, and everywhere you look there is just something beautiful to discover. Climbing up the western face of the mountain, for example, grants you a wonderful view of Lake Champlain Valley. It is truly one of my favorite places in Vermont.

In the summer, my family commonly goes swimming at the Passumpsic River, where you can find thriving wildlife such as crayfish, minnows, and rabbits! Once you park your car, there is a well-built play structure and a beautiful, green, wide open field. There is a small path you need to follow to get to the River, but once you're there you'll realize it was all worth it. The river has an enormous fallen tree that fell into the water that is just the most perfect color, and it's really easy to climb on! My personal favorite thing to do in the river is to swim around with the minnows, and it's hilarious because they are so curious in what you are that they just follow you wherever you go. That's why it's so easy to capture them, just because they are so close to you all the time!

Vermont is one of my favorite places to live in; and if you ever come to live here, or even just to visit for a little bit, I really do hope you have the same experience I did!
