

Earth Day Essay

"Wshh " wshh " , there's the sound of the water flowing down the river. The beautiful shiny water has happy fish, happy crawfish, but if we keep polluting the water there will be no fish or crawfish to fish for. I don't know about you, but I like to fish.

I'm lucky that I live near clean waters. But imagine living near waters with trash and guck. What would or could you do then? Some things that could help is clean up as much trash as you can, don't litter, snip up 6 pack plastic rings so animals won't get hurt, and lots lots more.

Vermont is a very nice place. You can pretty much do everything here, like swim, fish, hunt, run around or play outside, and even more, but we can't keep ruining this beautiful place. We can save this place with the smallest things we do. We don't need to waste stuff.

If more people clean up, every day we could clean up most of the trash that makes this world better, but if we don't clean up we can make this world way worse. Some ways we can help is turn off the lights when you're not using them because that's using up fossil fuel that goes into the atmosphere, shut off the water when you're brushing your teeth because some people don't have good tap water and you are wasting it when you let the water run. All these tiny bad things people do add up to big bad things for our earth. We can start planting trees for more oxygen. Some people think how do you get oxygen from trees? I know it's a long word but it is called photosynthesis. Trees use bad air and turn it into food, but they give us back good air in the process. That good air makes it so we can breathe.

Even the little things you do will help the earth and your state/country. It doesn't matter if you're five or one hundred, for all you know you're still helping the earth with the good deeds you do.
